S. H. THOMPSON FARMER-BANKER TALKS

PRESIDENT FARM BUREAU MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION

On His Audience at University Chapel Columbus, Monday, He Wants an Agricultural Policy That Will Function. Advocates Strict Adherence To the Golden Rule In Giving Economic Justice To the Farmer.

America is in need of a strong, definite agricultural policy that will work, Sam H. Thompson, Quincy, Illinois, farmer-banker and president of the American Farm Bureau federation, told a Farmers' week audience at University chapel.

Registration for the first day was up to 1256, 933 men and 323 women, as against a total of 1327—1039 men and 288 women—for the corresponding day last year.

Farm bureau activities practically monopolized the day, brought to a close by the evening program, during which National President Thompson was greeted formally.

Apple and grain shows and community newspaper exhibits were put under way and a score of speakers, at special meetings, discussed various subjects akin to agriculture.

Farm Bureau delegates to Farmers' Week instructed their executive secretary, Murray D. Lincoln, to request Senators Willis and Fess to support proposed legislation to provide federal market news service for the five major eastern livestock markets; another bill requesting establishment of a division of agricultural co-operation in the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics, and for a third proposed law that aims to raise the federal indemnity appropriation for tuberculosis afflicted cattle to $6,000,000.

To an overflow through Monday evening Mr. Thompson elaborated upon his pronouncement that the nation is in need of an agricultural policy that will function. He advocated strict adherence to the Golden Rule in giving economic justice to farmers. "Thus," he declared, "will be made secure the foundation and prosperity of the nation."

"America's financial policy," he said "developed thru the years with our banking system and was secured finally, thru the federal reserve act, for financial protection that makes panics almost impossible."

"The farmer is not getting a fair share of the national income. This is no recent development, tho the transfer of property from farmer to non-farmer hands was accelerated tremendously in the deflation after the war. Nor is this a problem that concerns the farm group alone. The national prosperity itself is not secure unless this difficulty is overcome speedily."

"Signs are hopeful right now for leaders in national life getting together. There is growing recognition of the view expressed by the late Samuel Gompers when he said, 'The battle field is not the goal, much as some would like to make it appear so; the counsel table means conference, negotiations and agreement.'"

"We feel that the advancing of co-operative efforts among farmers have been demonstrated so fully that this movement toward cooperation is a permanent established principle in our commonwealth. We urge that it be developed in a spirit of conservatism," he said.

Professor George W. Rightmire, acting president of the Ohio State university said, "I'd just like to tell you all that we are done investigating and there's not a 'Parlor Red' on the campus. We do not deny that there's been some drinking but it's been light ranged beside what is ordinary in a community of 9,000 people."

State Senator John M. Vorys, having "Necessity of Our Budget Law" as his subject, pointed out that taxes are spent by 88 counties, 92 cities, 2319 school boards and 1395 townships. "Many of the county commissioners city and village councilmen, school board members and township trustees," he said, "have the power of spending tax money under a host of different laws, hazily understood, loosely enforced and ignored often. As a result, debts of more than $1,879,000,000 have been piled up. Over 16 per cent of this vast sum is for deficiencies and refunding."

Success of the new law, in the opinion of Mr. Vorys, is dependent upon the sort of support and cooperation accorded by taxpayers and voters.

ESSAY CONTEST PRIZE WINNERS ARE ANNOUNCED

Early in the fall Congressman Martin L. Davey offered a scholarship of four thousand dollars for the best essay written by a high school student or by a member of last year's graduating class on forest conservation. This contest closed December 31, 1925.

The essays submitted by students of Pickaway county were read and judged by a committee composed of Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. E. A. Allen and Miss Emily D. Yates. In accordance with the rules of the contest, fostered by the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs the three best essays from the county were sent to the district chairman. The committee takes pleasure in announcing at this time that the winners from Pickaway county are Kathryn Sanders, Lucy Seall and David Speakman.

Youngstown—Victory Olson, wealthy Youngstown contractor, was indicted Monday on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of C. M. L. Altdorfer, former principal of the Garfield school. The former principal was killed November 12, in a collision between his and Olson's automobiles.

Columbus—Law Director F. M. Dotson of Toledo, on behalf of the city of Toledo, Monday filed formal protest with the state utilities commission against the proposed rate increase of the Ohio Bell Telephone company.

Cleveland—Despondent because of his failure to overcome the drink habit, John McHolski, 39, committed suicide Monday by slashing his throat with a knife.

Columbus—Judge E. L. Savage, Hocking Ohio, has resigned as deputy state superintendent of insurance it was announced Monday.

William C. Safford, a department employe has been appointed Savage's successor. Savage has become affiliated with an insurance company.

Columbus—The state public utilities commission has received the application of the Cambridge Home Telephone company to issue preferred stock to the value of $57,300. The money raised will be used in building additions to the company's plant.

Columbus—The Pennsylvania Railroad company has filed application with the state public utilities commission for permission to discontinue trains No. 815 which runs between Milford and Cincinnati, No. 976 which runs between Cincinnati and Morrow and No. 903 which runs from Morrow to Cincinnati. The increase in popularity of motor busses has made the train service between the designated points unprofitable.

Columbus—The state civil service commission Monday sustained the removal of James G. Gallagher, guard at the London prison farm who was ousted after four prisoners saved their way to freedom.

Gallagher was discharged by Superintendent W. F. Amrine who, in removing Gallagher and Edward Whelan, another guard, charged them with neglect of duty.

PROMINENT FARMER DIED IN HOSPITAL

Alonzo E. Weaver Passed Away at Mt. Carmel, Following an Operation.

Alonzo Eugene Weaver, a prominent farmer and fruit grower of Walnut township, died at Grant hospital, Columbus, Tuesday morning at four o'clock, following an operation performed Wednesday of last week.

Mr. Weaver was a son of David F., and Amanda Cole Weaver and was born in Amanda township, Fairfield county, January 19, 1852. On September 10, 1874, he married Mary C. Oman, who died November 1, 1901.

He is survived by three daughters; Mrs. George Marion and Mrs. Walter J. Marion, of Circleville township, and Mrs. Oren Ater, of Atlanta. He also leaves three grandchildren; Alonzo, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Marion, a student at Ohio State university; Gerald, a student at Oxford university, and Katherine, children of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Marion, at home.

Of his immediate family he leaves one sister, Mrs. Lida Brinker, of Walnut township.

August 9, 1913, Mr. Weaver married Mrs. Julia Patterson, who survives.

Mr. Weaver had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for sixty years and for a score of years was superintendent of the Hedges chapel Sunday school. He served many years as a member of the board of education in his township and was a member of Columbia lodge of Odd fellows, of this city, and of the Grange.

The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at one o'clock from the home, conducted by Rev. Mr. Sudlow, of Ashville and Rev. Mr. Chandler, of Columbus, and the body will be laid to rest in the mausoleum near Reber Hill cemetery.

The pallbearers will be M. J. Rife, George Scothorn, Charles Trone, J. E. Weiser, C. B. Teegardin and Ludwig B. Oesterle.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS AT U. B. CHURCH

Great Crowds Attend Nightly and Splendid Interest is Being Manifested.

Rev. L. G. Ludwick preached a powerful sermon at the U. B. church Monday evening, using for his text, "I Find no Fault With This Man." Rev. Ludwick showed as to how the "Pilate of today" whipped the devil round the stump, by finding no fault with the program of God, and then like Pilate they will join hands with the forces of sin to defeat the very purpose of God. It's not that they do not know better, but like Pilate, they refuse to do what they know to be right.

As long as children are trained to give $1 per week for the "movies" and 5 cents per week to the church program, possibilities will remain undiscovered and talents will be unused. There is too much down-right selfishness and deceptiveness. Herod would have as gladly received Jesus if he could have used Jesus like many of the Herods today. Jesus answered him nothing and Herod was so wroth that Pilate and Herod joined hands in order to defeat the purpose of Christ. Too many worship the devil around the stump by shifting responsibility.

The devil laughs and makes sport of the church just as long as his bunch is in power, but as soon as the church begins to take on new life, the devil begins to howl. The breweries and distillers fought for their own interests separately as long as they thought they had the ghost of a chance but as soon as they saw the hand writing on the wall, like Pilate and Herod they joined hands.

Mockers and scoffers are not all dead yet. Rotten politicians and dirty politics have always been a menace and will continue to be so as long as deceptiveness has right-of-way in the church.

A certain student body thought they could fool the preceptor by placing the wings, head and feet of other bugs on another bugs body—but the preceptor said, "boys, it's a humbug."

Humbugs are not all dead, yet. There's a big job for the church today and the church needs all of the prestige and power she can command, and God's storehouse is full of the richest blessings for those who will join hands with God and the windows of heaven will open and Circleville will receive a much needed cleaning.

Three found their way to the altar at the evangelist's invitation. Subject tonight; "She Might Have Seen Better Days."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HOW TO LEAVE AN ESTATE

"Do you know, Auntie," said Helen, as she accepted a cup of tea from Aunt Emmy, "I feel terribly sorry for Mrs. Strong."

"Yes," agreed Aunt Emmy. "It will be hard for her. She is such a dependent, helpless, little thing."

"Oh, I don't mean that," interrupted Helen. "Her feelings are so hurt because, as she says, her husband publicly insulted her by not making her executrix and trustee of his estate."

"Good gracious, child, did she say that?" exclaimed Aunt Emmy, setting her cup down with a bang.

"Yes, she did, Auntie," said Helen, enjoying the sensation she had made and determined to make the most of it. "and I'm sure I agree with her. The idea of that old man appointing a trust company to look after Mrs. Strong's money. It isn't as though there wasn't plenty of it. The Strong's are the richest people in town, I guess."

"Well, for mercy's sake!" cried Aunt Emmy, disgust in every syllable. "If it don't beat all! You are as big a fool as she is then!"

"What do you mean, Aunt Emmy?" asked Helen with dignity. "I think it nothing short of disgraceful for a man to show that he has no confidence in his wife by putting his money in strangers' hands to be doled out to her as they see fit."

"You never thought that up, Helen," said Aunt Emmy. "That's Mrs. Strong. She always talks as though she was living in a story book, poor, silly, little thing."

Helen blushed and Aunt Emmy went on—"Do you know what it means to administer an estate, especially a big one like Mr. Strong's?"

"Why, no," stammered Helen, "but it must be simple."

Aunt Emmy sniffed. "Simple! Let me tell you a little about it. When a man dies the things he owns cease for a time to be anybody's property and become his estate. The property passes from his control on his death naturally, and as his estate it is controlled and supervised by the Court which will be in charge of the estate for many months probably. First this Court finds out whether or not there is a will and if the will is valid. Then it must find out about the executor. If the will is properly drawn and valid, it will be 'admitted to probate.' The persons who witnessed it must be found and examined."

"The executor must satisfy the Court as to fitness and willingness to perform the many arduous duties involved. Perhaps he will have to furnish a bond, to assure the Court of his financial responsibility. He must assemble all the so-called assets, have them valued and file an inventory and appraisal of them with the Court. All the debts against the estate must be collected. The settlement of all claims against persons and corporations is a job no one without a thorough knowledge of business can undertake."

"In an estate like Mr. Strong's there is sure to be a certain amount of financial negotiation that demands banking knowledge. Then the executor must pay claims against the estate in the order of precedence laid down by law. Also you know state inheritance and federal estate taxes must be met promptly. Finally, after the estate is settled as to claims it has and claims against it, the executor must see that the various bequests are made."

"Oh, Auntie, don't tell me any more. I never thought that there were so many complicated things to be done. Poor Mrs. Strong never knew a thing about business."

"Mr. Strong knew that," remarked Aunt Emmy dryly, "and don't you suppose he had his children in mind, too? He wanted his estate handled so that the children and Mrs. Strong would be protected and assured of a good, comfortable living all their lives, with something to go on to the grandchildren. Even if Mrs. Strong were a business woman, no one could tell how long she would live to administer the estate. He knew that the trust company would not die, nor lose its faculties, nor be influenced by personal feeling so that it might be unjust to some one, and that it represents some of the best business and banking judgment in town."

"Well, I guess old man Strong knew what he was doing!" said Helen. — Anne B. Aymes.

The more recently adopted method of killing the common barberry which spreads black stem rust of small grains is by the use of such chemicals as salt and kerosene, according to the Department of Agriculture. These methods have several advantages over the digging method formerly used. They are less laborious, cheaper and more certain. This is especially true if bushes are growing in stony ground where digging is difficult. Department Circular 856 tells all about how to use this method.

Three Menaces
to Live StockInvasion of Foreign Diseases and Pests Met With Great Vigor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Three emergencies, each constituting a national menace to the livestock industry, were successfully met during the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry. Two of them were outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease, in California and Texas, while the third was the invasion of the United States by the European fowl pest, a new disease which, though extending to nine states, was successfully eradicated.

While emergencies of the kind mentioned are sometimes regarded as occurrences affecting only the livestock industry, information received from many sources show clearly the serious effect on industry and commerce. These effects extend to unemployment, transportation difficulties, reduced market prices of products, and public unrest. Realizing such consequences, the bureau has met the invasion of foreign diseases and pests with the greatest vigor.

Eradicating Tuberculosis.
In eradicating tuberculosis of live stock the combined state and federal forces tested about 32 per cent more cattle than during the preceding year. Altogether more than 7,000,000 head were officially tested, of which 3.1 per cent were condemned as diseased. This proportion of reactors is a slight decline compared with former years. A waiting list of 3,500,000 cattle at the end of the fiscal year shows the strong desire among cattle owners to have their herds tested.

The prevalence of hog cholera during the year was unusually low, due apparently to the practice of using the preventive serum treatment. Though the seeming conquest of this disease, which at one time caused enormous losses, is gratifying, the bureau calls attention to its treacherous nature and urges extreme watchfulness in bringing under control promptly any new outbreak that may occur.

Of special interest to livestock growers on farms and ranches throughout the country are the investigations conducted on the government's experiment farms. These are maintained to solve practical problems confronting stock owners in various regions.

Prevent Soft Pork.
One important investigation deals with definite methods of preventing softness and oiliness of pork, a condition due largely to feeding peanuts, soy beans, and other oil-bearing feeds. Numerous state experiment stations, particularly in the South where the problem is most serious, are co-operating with the bureau in this work which is now in its seventh year.

Studies of interest to sheepmen deal with the rate of wool growth. Practical knowledge on this important question is extremely limited, though preliminary work shows that the growth of wool and hair varies considerably during the different months and seasons of the year.

Extensive investigations concerning the quality, palatability, and food value of meat were planned during the year covered by the report, in co-operation with state experiment stations, producers, and the meat trade. This branch of research is expected to have an important bearing on the future of live-stock production and public knowledge concerning the food value of meats. In order to provide a means of measuring the quality of meat a machine has been designed for testing the tensile strength of meat fibers and another for measuring the force required to shear or break the fibers.

Farm Hints

Sheep drink little water at a time, but often, so that water should be convenient for them.

Merino is the wool sheep; Shropshire the all-purpose; and Southdown for the best mutton.

The value of milk as a feed for hens is often overlooked. It will prove a desirable addition to any laying ration.

A goat is a better protection for sheep than is any other animal. Dogs fear goats, but the goat has no fear of a dog.

Time and material spent in building a suitable poultry house or remodeling or refurbishing the old will draw good dividends.

Hard, sharp grit for grinding feed and oyster shells to supply lime for egg shells are both necessary. Neither will replace the other.

Keep the body weight of pullets up during cold weather by feeding liberal amounts of scratch grain, say poultry specialists of the Pennsylvania State college.

Officers Say.

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Tessie Pena, twenty-two-year-old border cabaret entertainer, has confessed the murder of Mrs. Frances L. Cole, her 81-year-old benefactress, police say, and wishes to die in the electric chair. The body of Mrs. Cole, stabbed and slashed in 18 places, was found in her home at National City, near here, Thursday.

"Yes, I did it," police quoted Mrs. Pena as having said. "She said my mother's picture looked like a bad woman's. I suppose they'll try to give me life imprisonment, but I want to go to the chair. I don't want to be thinking of this the rest of my life."

Mrs. Pena, who had lived with Mrs. Cole, was arrested in a cabaret across the border, deported to the United States as an undesirable alien and re-arrested at the border on a charge of murder.

Modes for Season Offered by Paris

Doubtful Fate of Back Fullness—New Frills and Furbelows.

These are the vital features of the autumn openings of the Paris couturier—an essentially broader silhouette, a waistline which is definite and distinct and which shows a rising tendency, the back flare, a skirt length which, while little changed mathematically, has added lengthening effects, a generous amount of elaboration in trimming and details, and a direct departure from bizarre boyishness.

Now the word of Paris, as issued at these seasonal openings, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, is no longer uttered in the stentorian tones of pre-war days, when the smartest French designers spoke but to be obeyed. It has become in comparison a still, small voice to be followed or not, according to the inclinations of fashion's new aristocracy, the mesdames of the mode—otherwise known as the penultimate consumers. No longer does an uncritical public accept willy nilly the convention-made dicta of the Rue de la Paix and surrounding avenues, and probably half the themes launched at each semi-annual showing are ruthlessly discarded by the spirited members of the modern haute monde. Wherefore it behooves the followers of fashion to carefully analyze the new themes in order to separate the chaff from the wheat, and in order to ascertain which themes are to be the distinguishing marks of the chic monde during the season.

The Invariable Flare.

The wider silhouette per se offers no problem save in the minds of those who are constitutionally unable to shake off the thrill of the slim straight line. Resistance, of course, is the human element which combats every fashion change, and the long duration of the narrow silhouette made the departure from it more than usually difficult. Last autumn witnessed a few tremulous instances of the flare, always with the straight line offered as an alternate; last spring saw most of the couture converted to the wider outline, and the present season has uncompromisingly declared itself in favor of the full silhouette.

The defined waistline is another theme to which the mode and its followers were predisposed. Long years of tubular iteration had made the waistless outline appear a little faded even in the eyes of its most ardent adherents, and changes have been

Moderate skirt length, elaborate decoration and the passing of the mode garcon are three effects with but a single cause. Bizarre extremes are at best the vogue of a single season, and the ever-increasing tide of fashion toward normalcy has accounted for all of these three effects. The abbreviated skirt had reached the kneeline in Paris, and whatever physical freedom it afforded its wearer was more than offset by the accompanying mental discomforts suffered by the cultured woman. Moderation is the keynote to taste, and the acutely abbreviated skirt was its direct antithesis. The present skirt length, while not materially different than last season's, has added points and scallops to convey greater length, and most designers have created the majority of their models to give this lower effect. Just as the tendency of the waistline is to go a little higher, the skirt hem is headed a little lower, and the smart autumnal maiden, while retaining in general the short skirt, will never let it reach the distressful extremes of last season. Fifteen inches off the ground is about the proper length.

Elaboration and a more feminine atmosphere to the new models obviously go hand in hand. The very boyish bob and an inartistic mannishness affected by some Paris extremists during the summer led many to believe that severe mannishness was to be the guiding spirit of autumn fashions. As has been frequently pointed out, the tendency of the mode in smart circles was and is distinctly toward maturer, saner and more feminine styles, and the severe coiff was last summer's only real evidence of mannishness, save among some bizzarrists who carried little authority. At any rate the autumn offerings are more frilly than in many seasons and there is every indication that increased elaboration will meet with favor among the minions of the mode. For in the ranks of fashion the eternal feminine is steadily replacing the fleeting feminist.

Patou Uses Fuller Lines.

The Patou collection always marks a milestone on the road of fashion. Whenever anything new is to be shown one can be sure of finding the latest interpretation of the novelty in the stately salons of the Rue St. Florentin. This season Patou contents himself with stabilizing the new higher waistline that he introduced in the spring, and even there he temporizingly admits the possibility of other things, for some of his new models have the waistline near the hips, while others raise it so that length of skirt is the main feature on which emphasis is laid.

Both coats and dresses are fuller than before, while jackets are either very long or very short. These, like the wraps, are copiously trimmed with fur which, according to Patou, is the only trimming able to create an effect of richness and comfort in winter time.

Many plain fabrics are used, including the old favorite crepe satin, but the dominating note this winter is silk velvet. There is also a new silk velvet with a straight pile, something like a plush. This velvet falls in a special manner and Jean Patou has retained the exclusivity of the fabric for some months to come, so that models made of it may be considered as characteristic of that house.

Colors are rich and varied. There is, of course, the black, brown and beige that always forms the basis of the winter wardrobe, but much red is used, especially a grenadine shade and a deep corinthian red that has been christened Patou's Corinthian. There are also two new greens, one a yellowish shade, the other a deep moss green, while the gamut of blues has not been neglected.

There are new little idiosyncrasies such as the placing of a group of box plaits at the back of a skirt instead of the front, and a frock with its flounces behind. But fullness is everywhere. Some dresses have it in front, others coming in a flare from the sides, and some have godets all around. Everything is permissible and nearly everything is used.

Some firms advertise by mailing circulars. Pickaway County has about 5,000 homes. Circulars mailed to each home costs the sender about $150.

Money spent in this manner must be added to the overhead expense and the customer pays that expense.

The Circleville Welding Co.'s policy has always been to reduce expense and give the customer the benefit of the saving. Having been in business for the past six years we need no introduction. All the leading industries of Circleville and the many surrounding towns have their work done here. Why not you. We don't do a cheap job merely to meet competition but do you a real 100 percent job at a reasonable price as possible.

hinted at occasionally during previous openings. It cannot be said that the defined waistline is anything near as universal or distinct a tendency as the broad silhouette, but the idea has been incorporated into the leading collections and it is certain to gain momentum as the season progresses. Just now it occupies the same position as the flare a year ago—it is not prescribed and it can be omitted, but the forward-looking ladies of the mode will avidly accept it.

Predisposition was the raison d'être for the back flare. Spring and summer having witnessed front flares and side flares ad infinitum, it was only natural that the designers would seek new havens for their elaborations, and nothing but the back remained. The flat back had been one of the prime essentials of the old outline and it was almost heresy to dare disturb it, but the couture, acceding to the restlessness of the moment, made the attempt. It has not been a particularly happy one and most of the effects achieved have been awkward and inartistic. Unless the Paris salons are able to incorporate the back flare in a more attractive manner it is doomed to pass quickly into the discard. In any case it is not an essential of the mode and its acceptance is purely an individual matter—it is neither a prescribed nor a proscribed element of the new chic.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN IN WESTERVILLE

Mrs. Mary E. Lee Was Hostess to Large Gathering at Her Home Monday.

Declaring that attacks on Governor Donahey only advertised the governor and damaged the Republican party, county chairmen at a banquet for editors of Republican newspapers on Monday night at the home of Mrs. Mary E. Lee, Westerville postmistress, scored the alleged policy of Chairman Warner, of the Republican state executive committee in leading such attacks.

The speakers were unanimous in agreeing that the debt incurred during the last gubernatorial campaign should be paid by Republicans before starting of the primary campaign. The amount was estimated to be from $70,000 to $110,000, part of which should be paid from the surplus held by the Republican national committee, it was said.

A call for a meeting of the Republican county chairmen at Republican headquarters in Columbus February 24, when methods of financing the debt will be discussed, was issued by Warren Thomas, of Warren, chairman of the county chairmen's organization.

Speakers included Mr. Thomas; S. G. Dowds, Knox county; Samuel Ashman, Tuscarawas county; Herbert R. Mengert, correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer; Lieutenant Governor Charles H. Lewis, former Attorney General Edward C. Turner and former Senator George E. Kryder.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Chappellear, of this city, attended the meeting.

x HARTMAN THEATER. x x x x x x x x

Fred Stone, long the best beloved comedian on the American stage in "Stepping Stones" said to be the best show he has ever had, returns to Columbus for his regular triennial engagement on Monday night, February 1, when he opens an engagement of one week at the Hartman theater. The famous entertainer comes here under the management of Charles Dillingham after long engagements in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. The original New York cast and production are promised.

Another member of the Stone family will also make her appearance on this occasion. She is Dorothy, the 18 year old daughter of the famous fun-maker. She is an accomplished actress, singer and dancer, and above all has the magnetic quality of her father's which reaches across the foot lights and grips the audience. Of this magnetism there are many shades and tones among players. Dorothy's is of the shade and tone of her father's—she convinces her audience that she has an affectionate regard for them, too, exchanging love for love which has been part of the secret of her father's success all these years. Fred Stone has always been on the level with his audiences, giving them the best that is in him and giving it in generous quantity from an overflowing heart. Dorothy possesses this same high sense of duty, of honor and integrity.

The critics of the larger cities have pronounced "Stepping Stones" as of finer quality intrinsically than any of its predecessors. Hitherto the Stone shows—since "The Red Mill" at any rate could be effectively described as "musical comedy." Always they have been superb. Fred Stone's batting average hovers around 100 per cent—but always, too, were they of the grain and texture of "musical comedy." "Stepping Stones" is considerably better and is best described as musical extravaganza. Anne Caldwell wrote the lyrics and with the assistance of R. H. Burnside, the book, while Jerome Kern composed the music. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders now.

CAR STEALING IS ON THE INCREASE

Anyone With Slight Mechanical Ability Can Start Auto Without Key.

Automobile stealing is a business that, despite the Dyer act, goes on at an astonishingly fast rate throughout the country, according to the legal department of the Chicago Motor club. The unlocked car, of course, is the greatest source of supply. Many car owners think because the ignition is turned off that the thief is foiled, whereas anyone with slight mechanical ability can start a car without a key. The most common method is to run a wire from the ammeter to the coil, but there are numerous schemes equally effective.

Habit of Locking Car.

"Make a habit of locking your car, and following a psychological law, it will be practically impossible to forget to lock it," says the club bulletin. "Lock it at all times, even when you are going to be in view of the car while you leave it for a few minutes, then you will never forget it when you are going to be away from it for hours."

"Even cars that are locked are stolen. Some thieves operate in this fashion. They drive a car of some popular make, and in driving along they see another car as like their own as the proverbial two peas in the pod. They stop behind it, or in a corner directly opposite from the car they intend to steal. Then they go to a telephone and call a tow car, giving the description of the car. Perhaps they conveniently forget their own license number, but at any rate they see to it that their own car is left untouched, while the other one is picked up. They stroll up to the men on the tow truck and tell them they will ride with them to the garage. It is easy for them to manufacture some reason for towing the car, and once at the garage the unsuspecting proprietor gives the supposed owner the car whenever he demands it. Should the rate owner appear on the scene as his car is being towed, the thieves get themselves out of their predicament neatly and quickly by passing the blame on to the stupidity of the garage mechanics in picking up the wrong car. This story is generally accepted by the real owner."

Put Keys in Mail Box.

"Automobile thieves have taken advantage of conditions in towns where garages make a practice of delivering cars to boarders at their homes. Many times the owner will instruct the garage attendants to put his keys in the mail box at a certain time. The thieves make a survey of the situation, and are often able to step into the vestibule, a minute or two before the owner comes down to get his car. They get the keys and are away from the scene of the theft in a minute. "Thousands of cars are recovered, but in numerous instances the owner does not get his property back because the thieves have made such changes in the car that it is impossible to identify it. Every motorist should have a secret number placed somewhere on the car. In case his car is stolen this number would serve as a means of identification."

Front Wheel Bearings

Give Out If Ungreased

The common reason why the front wheel bearings of a motor car give out is because the greasing of them is neglected. But the expert motorist knows that there is no excuse for this neglect.

The front-wheel caps should be removed every three to six months in the summer time, depending, of course, on how much the car is being driven. Fill them with soft grease and screw them back into place. It should be remembered in doing this work that the left front cap may have a left thread instead of a right one.

When the caps are removed the condition and adjustment of the bearings should be noted. If they require adjustment or repair the car should be taken to a shop unless the owner feels competent to do the work.

In putting the caps back into place extreme care should be used not to cross the threads. This is an error that is easily made, since the threads are very fine and the diameter of the cap relatively large.

MOTOR CARS FOR MOVING RACE HORSES

Shows the latest motor cars in use for the moving of racing and other high-grade horses. This especially built motor car, which is equipped with every convenience for the horses, is being used by the Perry stables of Menlo Park, Cal., and carries five horses.

Spare Tubes Should Be Wrapped to Avoid Sliding

"Box worn" means about the same thing in inner tubes as "shop worn" means in clothes. Both are damaged goods.

When an inner tube leaves a rubber factory it is ordinarily packed in waxed paper and placed in a box to keep it in perfect condition from factory to customer. But this waxed paper packing which is so essential to insure its resiliency and elasticity—in other words, its live quality—is not intended to be the packing which will protect the tube carelessly thrown in the tool box of a car.

Here the constant jolting and swerving of the car cause the loosely-packed tube to chafe against the sides of the box, according to Miller. As a result, the tube chafes through at the folds. If it is a repaired tube loosely thrown in the tool box, it ordinarily lacks even the protection of the box against cutting on the sharp edges of the tools.

A motorist will always find in the roadside emergency that his tubes are in the same serviceable condition as when he placed them in the car, if he will carefully wrap them in soft cloth or paper so that they cannot slide around in the wrapping. Better even than this, however, is the purchase of a tube bag.—Motor Life.

a new cure for auto speeders, who cripple or kill pedestrians. The speeder has to sit for one hour alone in the morgue with the body of his victim.

Wheel Out of Alignment Cause of Wear on Tires

"Bumping into curbs, hitting bumps in the road, turning out into gutters and similar strains, shocks and jolts are very likely to cause misalignment or wobbling of wheels, or both.

When this happens the wheels travel with a skidding action, which wears down treads very rapidly, even if the irregularity is so slight that the eye can hardly detect it. You should, therefore, test your wheels frequently to make sure that they run true.

Probably as many as one car in three has one or more misalignment or wobbly wheels, robbing their tires of thousands of miles of service.

Because of the turn-to-the-right rule of the road the right front wheel is often forced into the rough going at the side of the road and is likely to receive severe glancing blows, which produce misalignment, springing or dishing.

Oil in Radiator Will Enter Through Gasket

What does oil in the water of the radiator indicate? And how can oil get into the cooling system?

Oil will get into the water if the cylinder head gasket is cracked or if the head bolts have not been screwed down evenly and properly. It is the result of a cheap valve-grinding job. It will always be accompanied by loss of water, even though there are no apparent leaks in the pump or cooling system connections. The water leaks into the cylinders and the oil, working past the rings into the cylinders, is forced into the cooling system.

Keeps Plaster Soft

Plaster of paris may be kept soft by the use of commercial retarders which may be purchased from retail dealers of plaster of paris and gypsum. The amount to be used depends upon the material itself. Ordinarily 2 per cent of a retarder such as tannic acid will prevent the plaster of paris from setting for about two hours.

The Consumer's Dollar

Of the consumer's dollar, 79.6 per cent is the average required for necessities, including shelter, food, clothing, light and heat. This leaves 20.4 per cent for savings, entertainments, development and sundry expenses.—Good Hardware.

CORN GROWING STATES MAKE SUGAR MARKET

Suggestion Goes to the Vital Questions That Loom Large in This Country.

If the American people will use sugar made from corn a new market will be created to absorb the average surplus of that crop produced in this country. If the people will buy from themselves only one-fourth of the present import of sugar they will make a new market for nearly 100,000 bushels of corn here at home. That would save the farmer from selling his corn at prices dictated by Liverpool and buying his sugar at prices dictated by Cuba.

That plan for taking betterment into the corn growing states has been made public by George Kuhns, president of the Bankers Life company of Des Moines, Iowa, who says corn sugar is perfectly good and has been used on his table for years. He has prepared a detailed statement of corn production, exports, sugar imports, the economic and manufacturing questions involved, and has sent it to every policyholder in his company, distributing his helpful suggestions over 20 states and to many thousands of people in different walks of life. His contribution, offered that better conditions may be developed in the big corn states, is an illustration of the more than life insurance service that is given by the big companies in that field. There is social work, health work, economic service and other interesting and important contributions made by the life insurance companies which most helpful to the public.

The corn sugar suggestion of President Kuhns goes to the economic and agricultural questions that loom large in the agricultural states. It is in harmony with the suggestion of President Coolidge that organized effort among the farmers promises far more important results than legislation. It contemplates a market at home for surplus corn grown, it contemplates a supply of sugar made at home. That means manufacturing activity in the corn states and, as a result, a market for corn is produced, it means an improvement of prime importance in agricultural land values, farm prosperity, very desirable in the standpoint of the nation. President Kuhns says one bushel of corn will make 25 pounds of sugar, des corn oil, molasses and stock for which there is an established market. The suggestion is more fully established in business wisdom than the plan for creating artificial prosperity by legislation, even if it might prove possible for prosperity to be created by that method. The plan has written in an interesting and may be expected to attract generous attention.—Ohio State Journal.

United States Press Association.

Warren—Three firemen were injured seriously and eight were overcome by smoke in a fire that swept the Braden block in the heart of Warren's business district Monday. Damage was estimated at $250,000.

New Philadelphia—Confronted with charges that he had fraudulently drawn $2700 from the city treasury, James T. Frewen, 68, superintendent of streets here for 20 years, resigned after returning the money to the treasury. The charges were made by State Examiners John Powellson, Ward Ashman who were summoned to examine the treasury's ledgers. Both examiners asserted Frewen had illegally paid for brick and sand and that no returns had ever been made to the treasury.

Findlay — Gas seepage from a broken main, Monday was believed responsible for the explosion which killed Miss Emily Fleming, 36, at her home here Sunday.

When Miss Fleming went to the cellar, she found the light had burned out. She struck a match and the blast followed. The house was partially wrecked.
Miss Fleming's mother and brother who were in the house at the time, escaped uninjured.

Cincinnati — City Manager C. O. Sherrill, soon will propose a league of Ohio Municipalities and will ask each city to join, it was announced. Formulation of the league is now banned by state laws which prohibit cities extending financial support to such organizations.

Canton — The condition of Mayor S. M. Swartz, who was stricken suddenly Wednesday with appendicitis, was reported critical. Peritonitis has developed and physicians declared Swartz's condition was becoming more grave hourly.

Canton — Reda Golagaski, 45, confessed Monday according to police, that he killed John Zindrich by beating him on the head with a bottle. Golagaski said he attacked Zindrich when he discovered the latter emerging from his wife's bedroom.

Zindrich's body was found at the bottom of a flight of stairs in Golagaski's home.

Golagaski was charged with manslaughter.

Columbus — Ohio State university was given a clean bill of health, its student body absolved of charges of liquor drinking and its faculty cleared of accusations of disseminating communist doctrines in a report submitted to Governor Donahey by the special committee of trustees who conducted the recent university investigation.

Needed inventions

Several famous scientists have drawn up a list of needed inventions. These inventions, some of them simple, should be well received by the public. The list includes: Glass that will bend, unshrinkable flannel, a noiseless airplane, an easily cleaned pipe, greatly simplified clothing which is not strange in appearance, a new game of skill, an improved fog signal, a dandelion extractor, and a fire-grate giving the "open fire" effect without wasting the major part of the fuel.

More No-Horse Streets

Los Angeles is the first city to bar the horse from certain streets. Now Washington permits no horse-drawn vehicles on four of its congested boulevards. Other cities are likely to establish horse-prohibited streets, and it may be, in years to come, that thousands of city children will have to go to the zoo to see a horse as they now do to see a cow.—Capper's Weekly.

Wins in Big Damage Suit—Jury Instructed Returns Verdict For Defendant.

A mountain conceived and a mouse was born.
An anticipated "battle royal" proved to be but a short skirmish.
Starting Monday morning, the $51,768.25 damage suit of Chas. D. Boldozer against the Scioto Valley Railway and Power Co., for damages when the plaintiff's auto was run into at the Adelphi pike crossing in the fall of 1923, came to a rather abrupt termination in the afternoon when Judge Blosser directed a verdict for the defendant.—Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe.

SHELL PROBLEM IS SOLVED BY CIVILIAN

New Way of Turning Out Ammunition Suggested.

Washington—An apparently offhand suggestion on shellmaking, dropped casually into an army ordnance experts' meeting, may serve to simplify Uncle Sam's whole problem of having at hand enough big gun projectiles to shoot up an enemy who obtained or attempted to obtain a footing on American soil.
Experiments already made indicate a wholly practical way of turning the American peace-time production of 350,000 tons of seamless steel tubing every year into a war output of shell casings up to 10-inch caliber at a rate of thousands per day without additional machinery.
All shell casings used during the war or manufactured since were turned to size, pointed on one end and squared off on the other in lathes, then bored out. It is a long, hard manufacturing process. It took terrific drive in the war to build up the output of any single factory to 200 or 300 shells a day.
He Asks Why.
At a meeting of ordnance men, a reserve officer who is a steel plant man in civilian life, asked, in discussing shell-turning facilities, why it would not be possible to spin them hot off of whirling, red-hot seamless steam tubes which are produced commercially for gas well use in virtually all sizes for the artillery up to 10 inches in diameter. Experiments were started voluntarily to test the scheme. While the War department is not in a position to make any definite announcement, it looks as though a long stride in national preparedness had been made.
"They just cut 'em off like sausages," is the way one officer described the new process.
New Angle Developed.
Even the necessity of boring out the squared and pointed ends after the spinning in order to make a place for the explosive charge and fuse has developed a new angle of its own. It appears in practice that impurities in the metal are forced toward the center by the spinning process and when this is cut out by boring the impurities are removed automatically.
The ten-year ammunition reserve project of the War department is based on storing $300,000,000 worth of small arms and artillery ammunition, the oldest projectiles and cartridges to be fired away each year and replaced with new stock.
If the spun shell case plan works out and a system for fast loading, fuse making, banding, etc., is developed to supplement it, presumably a material reduction could be made in the stored reserves, as the twelve-month delay in procuring projectiles in sufficient numbers after war is declared now controlling the department's plans would have been scaled down.

Tattooed Chinks in Dread

Consternation reigns in the native city of Shanghai, China, because of an order issued by Col. Yen Tsung-yang, acting commander of martial law, that all men bearing certain tattoo marks are to be arrested. Just what the marks are no Chinese seems to know. Hence the alarm. But the order has brought a repetition of conditions that existed a year ago when tattoos indicating membership in some secret society were banned. Now hundreds of innocent Chinese are inflicting great pain upon themselves by trying to remove tattoos with acids and by scraping their flesh with knives.

KEEPING WELL

PREVENTING FIRE LOSSES

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

LAST year fire killed 14,542 persons, injured 15,110 more and destroyed over $500,000,000 worth of property. Ninety per cent of this loss was due to carelessness and 100 per cent was preventable.
Sixty-five per cent of all fires are in the home. Over 800 homes burn up each day of the year or near 300,000 a year.
While the number of fires is greater in the cities than in the country, the relative loss is greater in the country. This would naturally be the case, as smaller towns do not have as complete fire-fighting equipment as do the larger cities, and fires once started are apt to cause greater destruction.
How can fires be prevented? By using, as far as possible, fireproof materials in building. The development of concrete and cement as building materials will probably in time reduce the number of fires.
But how about existing houses? A few rules drawn from statistics as to the causes of fires might be adopted in every household.
Keep matches only in safe containers out of the reach of children and mice. Don't leave matches lying around loose, especially don't let them get scattered around on the floor.
Be sure a match has gone out before you throw it away.
Don't allow gas light near wood-work, curtains or other inflammable material. Don't have curtains hanging near enough to open fireplaces or gas stoves, so that the curtain can blow into the flames.
Have your furnace, grate or stove chimneys or flues cleaned and repaired every spring and inspected in the fall before starting fires.
If you use electricity, disconnect irons, toasters and other electrical fixtures when not in use. Be sure the insulation is perfect in all points needing it.
Don't allow rubbish to collect in cellars, basements, woodsheds, under stairs, in closets or garrets.
Put hot ashes in metal cans. Don't start fires with kerosene or gasoline. Don't use benzene or gasoline for cleaning. There are a number of non-inflammable substitutes made that are perfectly safe.
Keep your eyes open for possible fire risks and teach your household habits of fire prevention.

Unveiling San Martin Monument

The friendly relations existing between the United States and Argentina were more firmly cemented with the unveiling of a monument to Gen. Jose de San Martin in Judiciary square, Washington. The statue is a replica of the one standing in a public square in Buenos Aires. In the photograph can be seen the ambassador from Argentina, Honorable Pueyredon (left), and Dr. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American union, standing at attention while the band plays the Argentine national anthem.

HOW THE OATS MARKET ACTED IN 1925

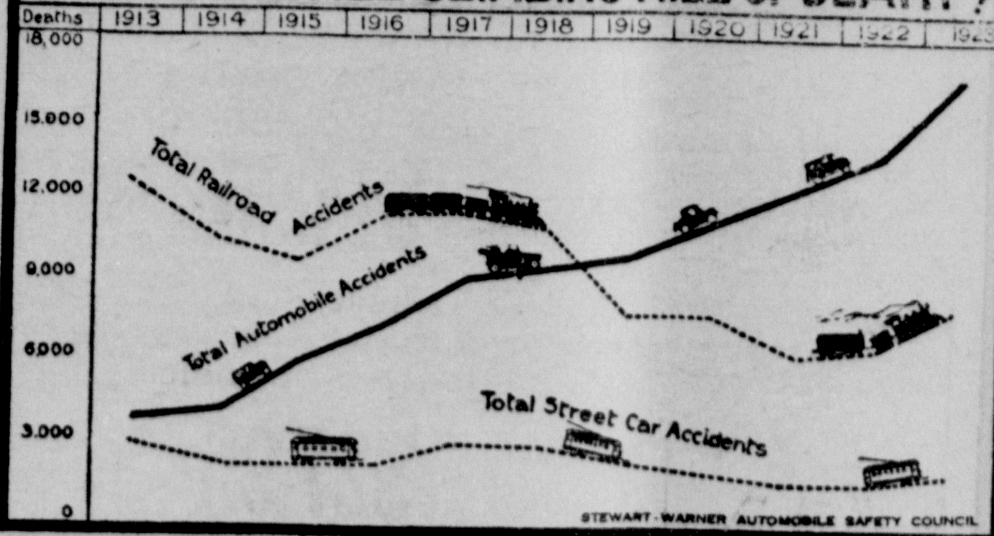

EARLY in 1925, oat prices were so high, reports the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, that consumption was actually checked. Then the market began to decline and with large stocks coming on through commercial channels, reached a low level in April, went up again in June, fell to less than 40 cents in August and stayed at that low level. The 1925 crop was 1,501,909,000 bushels and the carry-over from 1924 was larger than usual. Total supplies of oats in all sections were only 20,000,000 bushels less than in 1924 when the crop of 1,522,665,000 bushels was harvested.

Prices started to go down in February and March, went up somewhat during June but came down again in August and have maintained a general low level. Oat prices are likely to advance toward spring as commercial stocks are reduced and the consuming sections of the country draw more extensively on the terminal markets.

Auto Tragedies Increase as Other Travel Is Made Safer

AUTOS STILL CLIMBING HILL OF DEATH

WHILE railroad tragedies and street car accidents in the United States have gradually been diminishing in the last ten years, the annual toll exacted by automobile casualties is steadily mounting, says the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents. Railroad accidents have been cut more than one-third, or from 12,520 in 1913 to 8,078 in 1923, the latest government figures available. Street car fatalities also have been cut down one-third or from 3,080 in 1913 to 2,000 ten years later. Automobile deaths, on the other hand, have increased over five-fold. Against the 3,822 deaths in 1913 we have 10,452 in 1923, and the score is growing each year.

Care, more care and still more care, is the solution of this national problem. The pedestrian must be always on the alert and as spry as a kangaroo, if he is to keep out of harm's way, and the driver for his part must never relax his vigilance for a moment when human lives are at his mercy.

Thus goes an old familiar nursery rhyme. All of you know it, so we will not repeat it. Now, we do not mean to infer that we are "little pigs," but we just want to tell you that

WE, TOO, WENT TO MARKET

Friday, January 15th, we arrived in Grand Rapids, the Furniture Capital of America, with the thought of learning all we could relative to the newest patterns of furniture for this year. We also decided that we would learn all we could about the proper manner of construction of good furniture.

WE SAW MILES AND MILES

of beautiful furniture. And, folks, how we would have enjoyed taking you along with us. But, as that was impossible, we decided to do the next best thing, and so we ordered part of it shipped down here for the use of the folks about Circleville.

AN INTENSIVE COURSE IN FURNITURE MERCHANDISING

was given to those attending the market, and we took advantage of it. For five days, we attended this "school." And now, after our visit to the market, and after taking this training, we do feel that we are better fitted to render you more efficient service in your furniture buying. Bring your problems to us and we will try to solve them for you. At least, drop in and let us tell you more of what we saw and heard while

CROCKEYJOY ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

(Copyright.)

A Crockeyjoy Wedding

RUTH did as the kindly old Crockeyjoy had told her to do when she wanted to enter Crockey Town. First she brought Purz, her little silver cat with the emerald eyes, over to the side of the big red-velvet picture album. Next she opened the album to the picture of grumpy old Crockey Castle.

And as soon as ever he saw the Castle, Purz came to life. He flicked his whiskers just as a real cat would. Then he arched his back, and purred out his tail, and with that he stood up on his hind legs, and said he to Ruth, in his comical way, "Well, come, let's be on our journey, for I crave adventure like a tabby cat craves a mouse."

During all this while, Ruth had been shrinking in size almost as fast as a toy balloon when a pin is jabbed into it. In a moment more she was just Crockey-size. So she and Purz hastened down the great stone road which led to Crockey Castle. When they came to the drawbridge, it opened on a signal from Purz, and there they were, right in the busiest part of Crockey Town.

One of the first things Ruth noticed was that the gateway was strewn with rice grains. A long, white trail of them ran down the main street as far as she could see.

"Let's follow the rice trail," said Ruth to Purz. And follow they did. And where do you suppose it led them? Well, it ran up a street, and down a street, and through a long bazaar; then down a shaded courtyard, and—with one quick pounce Purz grabbed a little figure which stood hiding in the shadows. There was a startled cry of fright. A sound of many rice grains splashing to the pavement at once. And who do you think it was that Purz had caught?

It was the Crockeyjoy's nephew. After he had got back his senses, which had been half scared out of him when he felt Purz' paws on his neck, he related to them the story of why he was there, and of what he intended doing. From the facts he told them they gathered that there was to be a wedding between a beautiful Fairy Queen and a ruling Prince of the land of Crockey. The nuptials were to be celebrated over all the kingdom.

Now, there is a saying in Crockey Land that good luck dwells for the space of "six-times-seven-moons," on the ones who succeed in hitting the royal bride and groom with so much as a single grain of rice. Purz knew of this saying, as did the Crockeyjoy's nephew, and they told Ruth of it. Then she understood why the boy had brought the rice, which had leaked from the bag, and had left the trail they had followed.

After talking it over, the three of them decided to wait together in the archway for the nuptial procession to pass them.

As they waited, a crowd began to gather about them. All sorts and classes of folks were in it. Among the last to come was a great, fat matron, who proclaimed herself to be the wife of the "biggest butcher in Crockey Town." She talked about her new silk gown, and of her diamond earrings, and of how her feet ached, until everyone about her was annoyed. Finally she seated her plump self right down on the edge of the curbstone in front of the boy. The crowd pushed him against her. This angered her, and she whacked him across the shins with the handle of her umbrella. "Ouch!" he cried. "Don't hit me! I couldn't help it!"

Just at that moment there was a shout from the crowd. The procession was winding up the narrow street toward them. "Hurrah! Here they come. Watch out! Now! Now! Now!" And every one threw rice until the air was so full of it that it looked like a mimic snow storm.

They all forgot about the cross, old, butcher's wife. She wheezed and struggled and wheezed some more. Yet the crowd was jammed so tight, she couldn't get to her feet. Then her face grew red, and she clenched her teeth, and she struck out again with her umbrella. This time when she hit the Crockey boy he let out a yell of pain and he let the big bag of rice fall from his hands. It landed fair and square on top of her head. The rice ran over her hair, and down her back, and into her big wooden shoes, and even poured into her mouth.

After that the crowd broke up, for it was way past supper time in Crockey Town. Ruth and Purz said good-by to the boy, then they all three

BLISS GIRLS DEFEATED BY CIRCLEVILLE

Victory Was Hard to Win as Game Was Real Contest From Start to Finish.

Circleville high girls scored a hard won victory over Bliss college girls Saturday, January 30, at the Columbus Y. M. C. A. gym. The game was a fast one from the moment when Frances Jones, Circleville, forward, scored almost immediately after the team appeared on the floor until the final whistle blew. Bliss girls, who had not lost a game during the season presented a real fighting spirit, along with a spirit of true sportsmanship.

Fay Puckett starred for Circleville by making the highest number of baskets, altho Jones played exceptionally good game.

At the end of the first half the score was 14 to 10 in Circleville's favor which steadily increased to 18 to 21 at the end of the game.

S. H. THOMPSON FARMER-BANKER TALKS

PRESIDENT FARM BUREAU MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION

On His Audience at University Chapel Columbus, Monday, He Wants an Agricultural Policy That Will Function. Advocates Strict Adherence To the Golden Rule In Giving Economic Justice To the Farmer.

America is in need of a strong, definite agricultural policy that will work, Sam H. Thompson, Quincy, Illinois, farmer-banker and president of the American Farm Bureau federation, told a Farmers' week audience at University chapel.

Registration for the first day was up to 1256, 933 men and 323 women, as against a total of 1327—1039 men and 288 women—for the corresponding day last year.

Farm bureau activities practically monopolized the day, brought to a close by the evening program, during which National President Thompson was greeted formally.

Apple and grain shows and community newspaper exhibits were put under way and a score of speakers, at special meetings, discussed various subjects akin to agriculture.

Farm Bureau delegates to Farmers' Week instructed their executive secretary, Murray D. Lincoln, to request Senators Willis and Fess to support proposed legislation to provide federal market news service for the five major eastern livestock markets; another bill requesting establishment of a division of agricultural co-operation in the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics, and for a third proposed law that aims to raise the federal indemnity appropriation for tuberculosis afflicted cattle to $6,000,000.

To an overflow throng Monday evening Mr. Thompson elaborated upon his pronouncement that the nation is in need of an agricultural policy that will function. He advocated strict adherence to the Golden Rule in giving economic justice to farmers. "Thus," he declared, "will be made secure the foundation and prosperity of the nation."

"America's financial policy," he said "developed thru the years with our banking system and was secured finally, thru the federal reserve act, for financial protection that makes panics almost impossible.

"The farmer is not getting a fair share of the national income. This is no recent development, tho the transfer of property from farmer to non-farmer hands was accelerated tremendously in the deflation after the war. Nor is this a problem that concerns the farm group alone. The national prosperity itself is not secure unless this difficulty is overcome speedily.

"Signs are hopeful right now for leaders in national life getting together. There is growing recognition of the view expressed by the late Samuel Gompers when he said, 'The battle field is not the goal, much as some would like to make it appear so; the counsel table means conference, negotiations and agreement.'

"We feel that the advancing of co-operative efforts among farmers have been demonstrated so fully that this movement toward cooperation is a permanent established principle in our commonwealth. We urge that it be developed in a spirit of conservatism," he said.

Professor George W. Rightmire, acting president of the Ohio State university said, "I'd just like to tell you all that we are done investigating and there's not a 'Parlor Red' on the campus. We do not deny that there's been some drinking but it's been light ranged beside what is ordinary in a community of 9,000 people."

State Senator John M. Vorys, having "Necessity of Our Budget Law" as his subject, pointed out that taxes are spent by 88 counties, 92 cities, 2319 school boards and 1395 townships.

"Many of the county commissioners city and village councilmen, school board members and township trustees" he said, "have the power of spending tax money under a host of different laws, hazily understood, loosely enforced and ignored often. As a result, debts of more than $1,879,000,000 have been piled up. Over 16 per cent of this vast sum is for deficiencies and refunding."

Success of the new law, in the opinion of Mr. Vorys, is dependent upon the sort of support and cooperation accorded by taxpayers and voters.

ESSAY CONTEST PRIZE WINNERS ARE ANNOUNCED

Early in the fall Congressman Martin L. Davey offered a scholarship of four thousand dollars for the best essay written by a high school student or by a member of last year's graduating class on forest conservation. This contest closed December 31, 1925.

The essays submitted by students of Pickaway county were read and judged by a committee composed of Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. E. A. Allen and Miss Emily D. Yates. In accordance with the rules of the contest, fostered by the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs the three best essays from the county were sent to the district chairman. The committee takes pleasure in announcing at this time that the winners from Pickaway county are Kathryn Sanders, Lucy Seall and David Speakman.

Columbus—Law Director F. M. Dotson of Toledo, on behalf of the city of Toledo, Monday filed formal protest with the state utilities commission against the proposed rate increase of the Ohio Bell Telephone company.

Cleveland—Despondent because of his failure to overcome the drink habit, John McHolski, 39, committed suicide Monday by slashing his throat with a knife.

Columbus—Judge E. L. Savage, Hocking Ohio, has resigned as deputy state superintendent of insurance it was announced Monday.

William C. Safford, a department employee has been appointed Savage's successor. Savage has become affiliated with an insurance company.

Columbus—The state public utilities commission has received the application of the Cambridge Home Telephone company to issue preferred stock to the value of $57,300. The money raised will be used in building additions to the company's plant.

Columbus—The Pennsylvania Railroad company has filed application with the state public utilities commission for permission to discontinue trains No. 815 which runs between Milford and Cincinnati, No. 976 which runs between Cincinnati and Morrow and No. 903 which runs from Morrow to Cincinnati. The increase in popularity of motor busses has made the train service between the designated points unprofitable.

Columbus—The state civil service commission Monday sustained the removal of James G. Gallagher, guard at the London prison farm who was ousted after four prisoners sawed their way to freedom.

Gallagher was discharged by Superintendent W. F. Amrine who, in removing Gallagher and Edward Whisner, another guard, charged them with neglect of duty.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS AT U. B. CHURCH

Great Crowds Attend Nightly and Splendid Interest is Being Manifested.

Rev. L. G. Ludwick preached a powerful sermon at the U. B. church Monday evening, using for his text, "I Find no Fault With This Man." Rev. Ludwick showed as to how the "Pilate of today" whipped the devil round the stump, by finding no fault with the program of God, and then like Pilate they will join hands with the forces of sin to defeat the very purpose of God. It's not that they do not know better, but like Pilate, they refuse to do what they know to be right.

As long as children are trained to give $1 per week for the "movies" and 5 cents per week to the church program, possibilities will remain undiscovered and talents will be unused. There is too much down-right selfishness and deceptiveness. Herod would have as gladly received Jesus if he could have used Jesus like many of the Herods today. Jesus answered him nothing and Herod was so wroth that Pilate and Herod joined hands in order to defeat the purpose of Christ.

Too many worship the devil around the stump by shifting responsibility. The devil laughs and makes sport of the church just as long as his bunch is in power, but as soon as the church begins to take on new life, the devil begins to howl. The breweries and distillers fought for their own interests separately as long as they thought they had the ghost of a chance but as soon as they saw the hand writing on the wall, like Pilate and Herod they joined hands.

Mockers and scoffers are not all dead yet. Rotten politicians and dirty politics have always been a menace and will continue to be so as long as deceptiveness has right-of-way in the church.

A certain student body thought they could fool the preceptor by placing the wings, head and feet of other bugs on another bugs body—but the preceptor said, "boys, it's a humbug."

Humbugs are not all dead, yet.

There's a big job for the church today and the church needs all of the prestige and power she can command, and God's storehouse is full of the richest blessings for those who will join hands with God and the windows of heaven will open and Circleville will receive a much needed cleaning.

Three found their way to the altar at the evangelist's invitation. Subject tonight; "She Might Have Seen Better Days."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HOW TO LEAVE AN ESTATE

"Do you know, Aunt," said Helen, as she accepted a cup of tea from Aunt Emmy, "I feel terribly sorry for Mrs. Strong."

"Yes," agreed Aunt Emmy. "It will be hard for her. She is such a dependent, helpless, little thing."

"Oh, I don't mean that," interrupted Helen. "Her feelings are so hurt because, as she says, her husband publicly insulted her by not making her executrix and trustee of his estate."

"Good gracious, child, did she say that?" exclaimed Aunt Emmy, setting her cup down with a bang.

"Yes, she did, Aunt," said Helen, enjoying the sensation she had made and determined to make the most of it. "and I'm sure I agree with her. The idea of that old man appointing a trust company to look after Mrs. Strong's money. It isn't as though there wasn't plenty of it. The Strong's are the richest people in town, I guess."

"Well, for mercy's sake!" cried Aunt Emmy, disgust in every syllable. "If it don't beat all! You are as big a fool as she is then!"

"What do you mean, Aunt Emmy?" asked Helen with dignity. "I think it nothing short of disgraceful for a man to show that he has no confidence in his wife by putting his money in strangers' hands to be doled out to her as they see fit."

"You never thought that up, Helen," said Aunt Emmy. "That's Mrs. Strong. She always talks as though she was living in a story book, poor, silly, little thing."

Helen blushed and Aunt Emmy went on—"Do you know what it means to administer an estate, especially a big one like Mr. Strong's?"

"Why, no," stammered Helen, "but it must be simple."

Aunt Emmy sniffed. "Simple! Let me tell you a little about it. When a man dies the things he owns cease for a time to be anybody's property and become his estate. The property passes from his control on his death naturally, and as his estate it is controlled and supervised by the Court which will be in charge of the estate for many months probably. First this Court finds out whether or not there is a will and if the will is valid. Then it must find out about the executor. If the will is properly drawn and valid, it will be 'admitted to probate.' The persons who witnessed it must be found and examined.

"The executor must satisfy the Court as to fitness and willingness to perform the many arduous duties involved. Perhaps he will have to furnish a bond, to assure the Court of his financial responsibility. He must assemble all the so-called assets, have them valued and file an inventory and appraisal of them with the Court. All the debts against the estate must be collected. The settlement of all claims against persons and corporations is a job no one without a thorough knowledge of business can undertake.

"In an estate like Mr. Strong's there is sure to be a certain amount of financial negotiation that demands banking knowledge. Then the executor must pay claims against the estate in the order of precedence laid down by law. Also you know state inheritance and federal estate taxes must be met promptly. Finally, after the estate is settled as to claims it has and claims against it, the executor must see that the various bequests are made."

"Oh, Aunt, don't tell me any more. I never thought that there were so many complicated things to be done. Poor Mrs. Strong never knew a thing about business."

"Mr. Strong knew that," remarked Aunt Emmy dryly, "and don't you suppose he had his children in mind, too? He wanted his estate handled so that the children and Mrs. Strong would be protected and assured of a good, comfortable living all their lives, with something to go on to the grandchildren. Even if Mrs. Strong were a business woman, no one could tell how long she would live to administer the estate. He knew that the trust company would not die, nor lose its faculties, nor be influenced by personal feeling so that it might be unjust to some one, and that it represents some of the best business and banking judgment in town."

"Well, I guess old man Strong knew what he was doing!" said Helen.—Anne B. Aymes.

The more recently adopted method of killing the common barberry which spreads black stem rust of small grains is by the use of such chemicals as salt and kerosene, according to the Department of Agriculture. These methods have several advantages over the digging method formerly used. They are less laborious, cheaper and more certain. This is especially true if bushes are growing in stony ground where digging is difficult. Department Circular 356 tells all about how to use this method.—Banker-Farmer.

Three Menaces to Live Stock

Invasion of Foreign Diseases
and Pests Met With Great Vigor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Three emergencies, each constituting a national menace to the livestock industry, were successfully met during the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry. Two of them were outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease, in California and Texas, while the third was the invasion of the United States by the European fowl pest, a new disease which, though extending to nine states, was successfully eradicated.

While emergencies of the kind mentioned are sometimes regarded as occurrences affecting only the livestock industry, information received from many sources show clearly the serious effect on industry and commerce. These effects extend to unemployment, transportation difficulties, reduced market prices of products, and public unrest. Realizing such consequences, the bureau has met the invasion of foreign diseases and pests with the greatest vigor.

Eradicating Tuberculosis.

In eradicating tuberculosis of live stock the combined state and federal forces tested about 32 per cent more cattle than during the preceding year. Altogether more than 7,000,000 head were officially tested, of which 3.1 per cent were condemned as diseased. This proportion of reactors is a slight decline compared with former years. A waiting list of 3,500,000 cattle at the end of the fiscal year shows the strong desire among cattle owners to have their herds tested.

The prevalence of hog cholera during the year was unusually low, due apparently to the practice of using the preventive-serum treatment. Though the seeming conquest of this disease, which at one time caused enormous losses, is gratifying, the bureau calls attention to its treacherous nature and urges extreme watchfulness in bringing under control promptly any new outbreak that may occur.

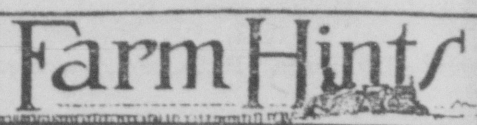

Of special interest to live-stock growers on farms and ranches throughout the country are the investigations conducted on the government's experiment farms. These are maintained to solve practical problems confronting stock owners in various regions.

Prevent Soft Pork.

One important investigation deals with definite methods of preventing softness and oiliness of pork, a condition due largely to feeding peanuts, soy beans, and other oil-bearing feeds. Numerous state experiment stations, particularly in the South where the problem is most serious, are co-operating with the bureau in this work which is now in its seventh year.

Studies of interest to sheepmen deal with the rate of wool growth. Practical knowledge on this important question is extremely limited, though preliminary work shows that the growth of wool and hair varies considerably during the different months and seasons of the year.

Extensive investigations concerning the quality, palatability, and food value of meat were planned during the year covered by the report, in co-operation with state experiment stations, producers, and the meat trade. This branch of research is expected to have an important bearing on the future of live-stock production and public knowledge concerning the food value of meats. In order to provide a means of measuring the quality of meat a machine has been designed for testing the tensile strength of meat fibers and another for measuring the force required to shear or break the fibers.

Sheep drink little water at a time, but often, so that water should be convenient for them.

Merino is the wool sheep; Shropshire the all-purpose; and Southdown for the best mutton.

The value of milk as a feed for hens is often overlooked. It will prove a desirable addition to any laying ration.

A goat is a better protection for sheep than is any other animal. Dogs fear goats, but the goat has no fear of a dog.

Time and material spent in building a suitable poultry house or remodeling or refurnishing the old will draw good dividends.

Hard, sharp grit for grinding feed and oyster shells to supply lime for egg shells are both necessary. Neither will replace the other.

Keep the body weight of pullets up during cold weather by feeding liberal amounts of scratch grain, say poultry specialists of the Pennsylvania State college.

The feeder who does not make sure of a sufficient supply of feed to carry the cattle purchased the desired time or to the desired condition often run into grief.

BENEFACTRESS

Who Confesses and Prefers
"Chair," California
Officers Say.

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 30.—

Mrs. Tessie Pena, twenty-two-year-old border cabaret entertainer, has confessed the murder of Mrs. Frances L. Cole, her 81-year-old benefactress, police say, and wishes to die in the electric chair. The body of Mrs. Cole, stabbed and slashed in 18 places, was found in her home at National City, near here, Thursday.

"Yes, I did it," police quoted Mrs. Pena as having said. "She said my mother's picture looked like a bad woman's. I suppose they'll try to give me life imprisonment, but I want to go to the chair. I don't want to be thinking of this the rest of my life."

Mrs. Pena, who had lived with Mrs. Cole, was arrested in a cabaret across the border, deported to the United States as an undesirable alien and re-arrested at the border on a charge of murder.

GEO. V. HOBART, HUMORIST, DEAD

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 1.—(U.P.)—George V. Hobart, humorist, better known for his stage success, "Experience," is dead here at the age of 59. Death came Sunday after an illness of several weeks.

Hobart began his career as a telegraph operator. Coming to Cumberland from his home in Nova Scotia he founded the "Scimitar" and later moved to Baltimore where the "Dinkelspiel" was launched.

The author is survived by two children, Vere and Bayne.

GAS HEATER CAUSED MONOXIDE GAS

Poisoning of Wife and Children of B. W. Jones At Home In East Union Street.

Last Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock the wife and two children of Mr. B. W. Jones who resides at 504 East Union street, were overcome by monoxide gas formed in the home by a gas-heater that was not connected with a flue.

Dr. Heffner, the family physician, was called and revived those who were overcome by the poisonous gas. The children of the family, in addition to being overcome by the gas fumes, have smallpox. It was a close call for the family that was subjected to the fumes. People should not be careless with the use of natural gas, if they would enjoy life.

Modes for Season Offered by Paris

Doubtful Fate of Back Fullness—New Frills and Furbelows.

These are the vital features of the autumn openings of the Paris couture—an essentially broader silhouette, a waistline which is definite and distinct and which shows a rising tendency, the back flare, a skirt length which, while little changed mathematically, has added lengthening effects, a generous amount of elaboration in trimming and details, and a direct departure from bizarre boyishness.

Now the word of Paris, as issued at these seasonal openings, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, is no longer uttered in the stentorian tones of pre-war days, when the smartest French designers spoke but to be obeyed. It has become in comparison a still, small voice to be followed or not, according to the inclinations of fashion's new aristocracy, the mesdames of the mode—otherwise known as the penultimate consumers. No longer does an uncritical public accept willy nilly the convention-made dicta of the Rue de la Paix and surrounding avenues, and probably half the themes launched at each semi-annual showing are ruthlessly discarded by the spirited members of the modern haute monde. Wherefore it behooves the followers of fashion to carefully analyze the new themes in order to separate the chaff from the wheat, and in order to ascertain which themes are to be the distinguishing marks of the chic monde during the season.

The Invariable Flare. The wider silhouette per se offers no problem save in the minds of those who are constitutionally unable to shake off the thrill of the slim straight line. Resistance, of course, is the human element which combats every fashion change, and the long duration of the narrow silhouette made the departure from it more than usually difficult. Last autumn witnessed a few tremulous instances of the flare, always with the straight line offered as an alternate; last spring saw most of the couture converted to the wider outline, and the present season has uncompromisingly declared itself in favor of the full silhouette.

The defined waistline is another theme to which the mode and its followers were predisposed. Long years of tubular iteration had made the waistless outline appear a little faded even in the eyes of its most ardent adherents, and changes have been

Moderate skirt length, elaborate decoration and the passing of the mode garcon are three effects with but a single cause. Bizarre extremes are at best the vogue of a single season, and the ever-increasing tide of fashion toward normalcy has accounted for all of these three effects. The abbreviated skirt had reached the knee-line in Paris, and whatever physical freedom it afforded its wearer was more than offset by the accompanying mental discomforts suffered by the cultured woman. Moderation is the keynote to taste, and the acutely abbreviated skirt was its direct antithesis. The present skirt length, while not materially different than last season's, has added points and scallops to convey greater length, and most designers have created the majority of their models to give this lower effect. Just as the tendency of the waistline is to go a little higher, the skirt hem is headed a little lower, and the smart autumnal maiden, while retaining in general the short skirt, will never let it reach the distressful extremes of last season. Fifteen inches off the ground is about the proper length.

Elaboration and a more feminine atmosphere to the new models obviously go hand in hand. The very boyish bob and an inartistic mannishness affected by some Paris extremists during the summer led many to believe that severe mannishness was to be the guiding spirit of autumn fashions. As has been frequently pointed out, the tendency of the mode in smart circles was and is distinctly toward maturer, saner and more feminine styles, and the severe coil was last summer's only real evidence of mannishness, save among some blazards who carried little authority. At any rate the autumn offerings are more frilly than in many seasons and there is every indication that increased elaboration will meet with favor among the minions of the mode. For in the ranks of fashion the eternal feminine is steadily replacing the fleeting feminist.

Patou Uses Fuller Lines. The Patou collection always marks a milestone on the road of fashion. Whenever anything new is to be shown one can be sure of finding the latest interpretation of the novelty in the stately salons of the Rue St. Florentin. This season Patou contents himself with stabilizing the new higher waistline that he introduced in the spring, and even there he temporizingly admits the possibility of other things, for some of his new models have the waistline near the hips, while others raise it so that length of skirt is the main feature on which emphasis is laid.

Both coats and dresses are fuller than before, while jackets are either very long or very short. These, like the wraps, are copiously trimmed with fur which, according to Patou, is the only trimming able to create an effect of richness and comfort in winter time.

Many plain fabrics are used, including the old favorite crepe satin, but the dominating note this winter is silk velvet. There is also a new silk velvet with a straight pile, something like a plush. This velvet falls in a special manner and Jean Patou has retained the exclusivity of the fabric for some months to come, so that models made of it may be considered as characteristic of that house.

Colors are rich and varied. There is, of course, the black, brown and beige that always forms the basis of the winter wardrobe, but much red is used, especially a grenadine shade and a deep corinthian red that has been christened Patou's Corinthian. There are also two new greens, one a yellowish shade, the other a deep moss green, while the gamut of blues has not been neglected.

There are new little idiosyncrasies such as the placing of a group of box plaits at the back of a skirt instead of the front, and a frock with its flounces behind. But fullness is everywhere. Some dresses have it in front, others coming in a flare from the sides, and some have godets all around. Everything is permissible and nearly everything is used.

Keen Observation When two men are riding in the front seat and two women in the back the whole bunch are married.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. hinted at occasionally during previous openings. It cannot be said that the defined waistline is anything near as universal or distinct a tendency as the broad silhouette, but the idea has been incorporated into the leading collections and it is certain to gain momentum as the season progresses. Just now it occupies the same position as the flare a year ago—it is not prescribed and it can be omitted, but the forward-looking ladies of the mode will avidly accept it.

Predisposition was the raison d'être for the back flare. Spring and summer having witnessed front flares and side flares ad infinitum, it was only natural that the designers would seek new havens for their elaborations, and nothing but the back remained. The flat back had been one of the prime essentials of the old outline and it was almost heresy to dare disturb it, but the couture, acceding to the restlessness of the moment, made the attempt. It has not been a particularly happy one and most of the effects achieved have been awkward and inartistic. Unless the Paris salons are able to incorporate the back flare in a more attractive manner it is doomed to pass quickly into the discard. In any case it is not an essential of the mode and its acceptance is purely an individual matter—it is neither a prescribed nor a proscribed element of the new chic.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN IN WESTERVILLE

Mrs Mary E. Lee Was Hostess to Large Gathering at Her Home Monday.

Declaring that attacks on Governor Donahay only advertised the governor and damaged the Republican party, county chairmen at a banquet for editors of Republican newspapers on Monday night at the home of Mrs. Mary E. Lee, Westerville postmistress, scored the alleged policy of Chairman Warner, of the Republican state executive committee in leading such attacks.

The speakers were unanimous in agreeing that the debt incurred during the last gubernatorial campaign should be paid by Republicans before starting of the primary campaign. The amount was estimated to be from $70,000 to $110,000, part of which should be paid from the surplus held by the Republican national committee, it was said.

A call for a meeting of the Republican county chairmen at Republican headquarters in Columbus February 24, when methods of financing the debt will be discussed, was issued by Warren Thomas, of Warren, chairman of the county chairmen's organization.

Speakers included Mr. Thomas; S. G. Dowds, Knox county; Samuel Ashman, Tuscarawas county; Herbert R. Mengert, correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer; Lieutenant Governor Charles H. Lewis, former Attorney General Edward C. Turner and former Senator George E. Kryder.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Chappelle, of this city, attended the meeting.

HARTMAN THEATER.

Fred Stone, long the best beloved comedian on the American stage in "Stepping Stones" said to be the best show he has ever had, returns to Columbus for his regular triennial engagement on Monday night, February 1, when he opens an engagement of one week at the Hartman theater. The famous entertainer comes here under the management of Charles Dillingham after long engagements in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. The original New York cast and production are promised.

Another member of the Stone family will also make her appearance on this occasion. She is Dorothy, the 18 year old daughter of the famous fun-maker. She is an accomplished actress, singer and dancer, and above all has the magnetic quality of her father's which reaches across the foot lights and grips the audience. Of this magnetism there are many shades and tones among players. Dorothy's is of the shade and tone of her father's—she convinces her audience that she has an affectionate regard for them, too, exchanging love for love which has been part of the secret of her father's success all these years. Fred Stone has always been on the level with his audiences, giving them the best that is in him and giving it in generous quantity from an overflowing heart. Dorothy possesses this same high sense of duty, of honor and integrity.

The critics of the larger cities have pronounced "Stepping Stones" as of finer quality intrinsically than any of its predecessors. Hitherto the Stone shows—since "The Red Mill" at any rate could be effectively described as "musical comedy." Always they have been superb. Fred Stone's batting average hovers around 100 per cent—but always, too, were they of the grain and texture of "musical comedy." "Stepping Stones" is considerably better and is best described as musical extravaganza. Anne Caldwell wrote the lyrics and with the assistance of R. H. Burnside, the book, while Jerome Kern composed the music. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

CAR STEALING IS ON THE INCREASE

Anyone With Slight Mechanical Ability Can Start Auto Without Key.

Automobile stealing is a business that, despite the Dyer act, goes on at an astonishingly fast gait throughout the country, according to the legal department of the Chicago Motor club. The unlocked car, of course, is the greatest source of supply. Many car owners think because the ignition is turned off that the thief is foiled, whereas anyone with slight mechanical ability can start a car without a key. The most common method is to run a wire from the ammeter to the coil, but there are numerous schemes equally effective.

Habit of Locking Car.

"Make a habit of locking your car, and following a psychological law, it will be practically impossible to forget to lock it," says the club bulletin. "Lock it at all times, even when you are going to be in view of the car while you leave it for a few minutes, then you will never forget it when you are going to be away from it for hours."

"Even cars that are locked are stolen. Some thieves operate in this fashion. They drive a car of some popular make, and in driving along they see another car as like their own as the proverbial two peas in the pod. They stop behind it, or in a corner directly opposite from the car they intend to steal. Then they go to a telephone and call a tow car, giving the description of the car. Perhaps they conveniently forget their own license number, but at any rate they see to it that their own car is left untouched, while the other one is picked up. They stroll up to the men on the tow truck and tell them they will ride with them to the garage. It is easy for them to manufacture some reason for towing the car, and once at the garage the unsuspecting proprietor gives the supposed owner the car whenever he demands it. Should the irate owner appear on the scene as his car is being towed, the thieves get themselves out of their predicament neatly and quickly by passing the blame on to the stupidity of the garage mechanics in picking up the wrong car. This story is generally accepted by the real owner."

Put Keys in Mail Box.

"Automobile thieves have taken advantage of conditions in towns where garages make a practice of delivering cars to boarders at their homes. Many times the owner will instruct 'the garage attendants to put his keys in the mail box at a certain time. The thieves make a survey of the situation, and are often able to step into the vestibule, a minute or two before the owner comes down to get his car. They get the keys and are away from the scene of the theft in a minute."

"Thousands of cars are recovered, but in numerous instances the owner does not get his property back because the thieves have made such changes in the car that it is impossible to identify it. Every motorist should have a secret number placed somewhere on the car. In case his car is stolen this number would serve as a means of identification."

Front Wheel Bearings

Give Out If Ungreased

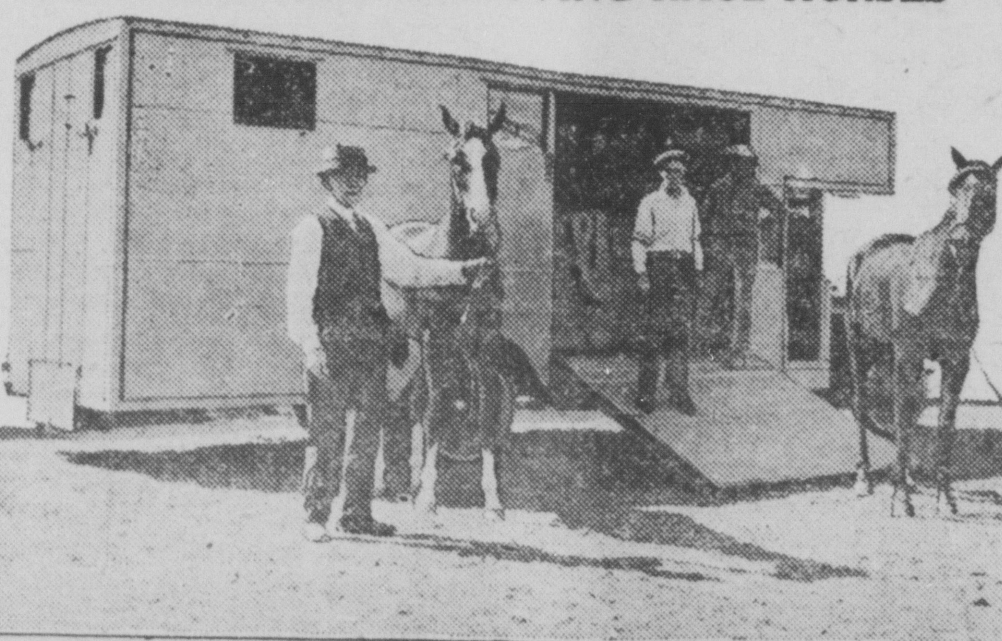

The common reason why the front wheel bearings of a motor car give out is because the greasing of them is neglected. But the expert motorist knows that there is no excuse for this neglect.

The front-wheel caps should be removed every three to six months in the summer time, depending, of course, on how much the car is being driven. Fill them with soft grease and screw them back into place. It should be remembered in doing this work that the left front cap may have a left thread instead of a right one.

When the caps are removed the condition and adjustment of the bearings should be noted. If they require adjustment or repair the car should be taken to a shop unless the owner feels competent to do the work.

In putting the caps back into place extreme care should be used not to cross the threads. This is an error that is easily made, since the threads are very fine and the diameter of the cap relatively large.

MOTOR CARS FOR MOVING RACE HORSES

Shows the latest motor cars in use for the moving of racing and other high-grade horses. This especially built motor car, which is equipped with every convenience for the horses, is being used by the Perry stables of Menlo Park, Cal., and carries five horses.

Spare Tubes Should Be Wrapped to Avoid Sliding

"Box worn" means about the same thing in inner tubes as "shop worn" means in clothes. Both are damaged goods.

When an inner tube leaves a rubber factory it is ordinarily packed in waxed paper and placed in a box to keep it in perfect condition from factory to customer. But this waxed paper packing which is so essential to insure its resiliency and elasticity—in other words, its live quality—is not intended to be the packing which will protect the tube carelessly thrown in the tool box of a car.

Here the constant jolting and swerving of the car cause the loosely-packed tube to chafe against the sides of the box, according to Miller. As a result, the tube chafes through at the folds. If it is a repaired tube loosely thrown in the tool box, it ordinarily lacks even the protection of the box against cutting on the sharp edges of the tools.

A motorist will always find in the roadside emergency that his tubes are in the same serviceable condition as when he placed them in the car, if he will carefully wrap them in soft cloth or paper so that they cannot slide around in the wrapping. Better even than this, however, is the purchase of a tube bag.—Motor Life.

Wheel Out of Alignment Cause of Wear on Tires

Bumping into curbs, hitting bumps in the road, turning out into gutters and similar strains, shocks and jolts are very likely to cause misalignment or wobbling of wheels, or both.

When this happens the wheels travel with a skidding action, which wears down treads very rapidly, even if the irregularity is so slight that the eye can hardly detect it. You should, therefore, test your wheels frequently to make sure that they run true.

Probably as many as one car in three has one or more misalignment or wobbly wheels, robbing their tires of thousands of miles of service.

Because of the turn-to-the-right rule of the road the right front wheel is often forced into the rough going at the side of the road and is likely to receive severe glancing blows, which produce misalignment, springing or dishing.

Oil in Radiator Will Enter Through Gasket

What does oil in the water of the radiator indicate? And how can oil get into the cooling system?

Oil will get into the water if the cylinder head gasket is cracked or if the head bolts have not been screwed down evenly and properly. It is the result of a cheap valve-grinding job. It will always be accompanied by loss of water, even though there are no apparent leaks in the pump or cooling system connections. The water leaks into the cylinders and the oil, working past the rings into the cylinders, is forced into the cooling system.

Keeps Plaster Soft

Plaster of paris may be kept soft by the use of commercial retarders which may be purchased from retail dealers of plaster of paris and gypsum. The amount to be used depends upon the material itself. Ordinarily 2 per cent of a retarder such as tannic acid will prevent the plaster of paris from setting for about two hours.

The Consumer's Dollar

Of the consumer's dollar, 79.6 per cent is the average required for necessities, including shelter, food, clothing, light and heat. This leaves 20.4 per cent for savings, entertainments, development and sundry expenses.—Good Hardware.

CORN GROWING STATES MAKE SUGAR MARKET

Suggestion Goes to the Vital Questions That Loom Large in This Country.

If the American people will use sugar made from corn a new market will be created to absorb the average surplus of that crop produced in this country. If the people will buy from themselves only one-fourth of the present import of sugar they will make a new market for nearly 100,000,000 bushels of corn here at home. That would save the farmer from selling his corn at prices dictated by Liverpool and buying his sugar at prices dictated by Cuba.

That plan for taking betterment into the corn growing states has been made public by George Kuhns, president of the Bankers Life company of Des Moines, Iowa, who says corn sugar is perfectly good and has been used on his table for years. He has prepared a detailed statement of corn production, exports, sugar imports, the economic and manufacturing questions involved, and has sent it to every policyholder in his company, distributing his helpful suggestions over 20 states and to many thousands of people in different walks of life. His contribution, offered that better conditions may be developed in the big corn states, is an illustration of the more than life insurance service that is given by the big companies in that field. There is social work, health work, economic service and other interesting and important contributions made by the life insurance companies which most helpful to the public.

The corn sugar suggestion of President Kuhns goes to the economic and agricultural questions that loom large in the agricultural states. It is in harmony with the suggestion of President Coolidge that organized effort among the farmers promises far more important results than legislation. It contemplates a market at home for surplus corn grown, it contemplates a supply of sugar made at home. That means manufacturing activity in the corn states and, as a sugar market for corn is produced, it means an improvement of prime importance in agricultural land values and farm prosperity, very desirable in the standpoint of the nation.

President Kuhns says one bushel of corn will make 25 pounds of sugar, des corn oil, molasses and stock for which there is an established market. The suggestion is more readily established in business wisdom than the plan for creating artificial prosperity by legislation, even if it might prove possible for prosperity to be created by that method. The plan he has written is an interesting and generous attention.—Ohio State Journal.

EYE TO BUSINESS

Violetta, the film star, was being married.
"So," said the bridegroom, "we are agreed. On Monday morning at nine o'clock we visit the registrar. After that we go to the church and then you are my own dear wife. Have you anything to say about the arrangements?"
"Only that the film rights will, of course, belong to me."—Lustige Blätter.

An Utter Stranger

A man who had slipped in a few minutes late to a funeral was obviously nervous during the minister's eulogy of the departed. Finally, turning to a neighbor, he whispered:
"Hey, is this George Q. Billings' funeral?"
"Certainly. Why?"
"Well, that fellow the preacher's talking about wasn't Billings."

HANDICAPPED

May—Madge seems to have lost her popularity since she returned from the beach.
Maud—My dear, she simply can't wear a bathing suit in town.

Opportunity

They do me wrong who say I come no more.
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

Algy Knew Them

A man had fallen overboard and a tragedy was at hand. "Throw him a life-saver!" yelled the captain.
"Oh, no!" shrieked Algy. "Worst thing in the world you know, really. They take the breath away."—Penn State Froth.

Longer Short Circuit

"What's the matter, dear?"
"Can't get this confounded self-starter to work. I think there must be a short circuit somewhere."
"How annoying! Can't you lengthen it?"

Man's a Contrary Critter

"My husband is forever kicking about the cost of women's clothes."
"A lot of men do that, but I notice they always hang around the best dressed women at parties."

Dizzy

"How d'ja lose your hair?"
"Worry."
"What d'ja worry about?"
"Losin' my hair."—Amherst Lord Jeff.

OR PROBABLY WILL BE

Mabel—I just left Jack—he's fairly wrapped up in his machine.
Maud—What a terrible smash-up it must have been!

Blows Best Way

Whichever way the wind doth blow
Some heart is glad to have it so;
Then blow it east or blow it west,
Whichever way, that way is best.

Yep!

"Didja see Alice Terry in 'Sackcloth and Ashes'?"
"No, but I saw Gilda Grey in purple tights."—Penn State Froth.

His Luck

O'Gay—Did you have much luck on your fishing trip?
Van Sport—Oh, pretty fair—I quit a slight winner.

In Accord

"Dear, I want you to have everything when you are married."
"So do I, Horace. That's why I cannot accept you."

Pushed

Highgate Magistrate—How is it you are here?
Man—Somebody pushed me into the police station.—Tit-Bits.

Fortune Teller—You have a tendency to let things slide.
Young Man—Yes, I play the trombone.—Penn State Froth.

When the Boss Is Around

"Now they say the honey bee is not really so busy. It just looks busy."
"Well, even that idea is worth imitating."

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Warren—Three firemen were injured seriously and eight were overcome by smoke in a fire that swept the Braden block in the heart of Warren's business district Monday. Damage was estimated at $250,000.

New Philadelphia—Confronted with charges that he had fraudulently drawn $2700 from the city treasury, James T. Frew, 68, superintendent of streets here for 20 years, resigned after returning the money to the treasury. The charges were made by State Examiners John Powellson, Ward Ashman who were summoned to examine the treasury's ledgers. Both examiners asserted Frew had illegally paid for brick and sand and that no returns had ever been made to the treasury.

Findlay — Gas seepage from a broken main, Monday was believed responsible for the explosion which killed Miss Emily Flemion, 36, at her home here Sunday.

When Miss Flemion went to the cellar, she found the light had burned out. She struck a match and the blast followed. The house was partially wrecked.

Miss Flemion's mother and brother who were in the house at the time, escaped uninjured.

Cincinnati — City Manager C. O. Sherrill, soon will propose a league of Ohio Municipalities and will ask each city to join, it was announced.

Formulation of the league is now banned by state laws which prohibit cities extending financial support to such organizations.

Canton — The condition of Mayor S. M. Swartz, who was stricken suddenly Wednesday with appendicitis, was reported critical. Peritonitis has developed and physicians declared Swartz's condition was becoming more grave hourly.

Canton — Reda Golagaski, 45, confessed Monday according to police, that he killed John Zindrich by beating him on the head with a bottle. Golagaski said he attacked Zindrich when he discovered the latter emerging from his wife's bedroom.

Zindrich's body was found at the bottom of a flight of stairs in Golagaski's home.

Golagaski was charged with manslaughter.

Columbus — Ohio State university was given a clean bill of health, its student body absolved of charges of liquor drinking and its faculty cleared of accusations of disseminating communist doctrines in a report submitted to Governor Donahey by the special committee of trustees who conducted the recent university investigation.

PERSONALS

Needed inventions

Several famous scientists have drawn up a list of needed inventions. These inventions, some of them simple, should be well received by the public. The list includes: Glass that will bend, unshrinkable flannel, a noiseless airplane, an easily cleaned pipe, greatly simplified clothing which is not strange in appearance, a new game of skill, an improved fog signal, a dandelion extractor, and a fire-grate giving the "open fire" effect without wasting the major part of the fuel.

More No-Horse Streets

Los Angeles is the first city to bar the horse from certain streets. Now Washington permits no horse-drawn vehicles on four of its congested boulevards. Other cities are likely to establish horse-prohibited streets, and it may be, in years to come, that thousands of city children will have to go to the zoo to see a horse as they now do to see a cow.—Capper's Weekly.

"When the steaming plate reached me I saw that the girl had certainly brought me a 'half-stew,' as six halves were floating about instead of six whole oysters."—Indianapolis News

A mountain conceived and a mouse was born.

An anticipated "battle royal" proved to be but a short skirmish.

Starting Monday morning, the $51,768.25 damage suit of Chas. D. Boldozer against the Scioto Valley Railway and Power Co., for damages when the plaintiff's auto was run into at the Adelphi pike crossing in the fall of 1923, came to a rather abrupt termination in the afternoon when Judge Blosser directed a verdict for the defendant.—Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe.

SHELL PROBLEM IS SOLVED BY CIVILIANNew Way of Turning Out Ammunition Suggested.

Washington—An apparently offhand suggestion on shellmaking, dropped casually into an army ordnance experts' meeting, may serve to simplify Uncle Sam's whole problem of having at hand enough big gun projectiles to shoot up an enemy who obtained or attempted to obtain a footing on American soil.

Experiments already made indicate a wholly practical way of turning the American peace-time production of 250,000 tons of seamless steel tubing every year into a war output of shell casings up to 10-inch caliber at a rate of thousands per day without additional machinery.

All shell casings used during the war or manufactured since were turned to size, pointed on one end and squared off on the other in lathes, then bored out. It is a long, hard manufacturing process. It took terrific drive in the war to build up the output of any single factory to 200 or 300 shells a day.

He Asks Why.

At a meeting of ordnance men, a reserve officer who is a steel plant man in civilian life, asked, in discussing shell-turning facilities, why it would not be possible to spin them hot off of whirling, red-hot seamless steam tubes which are produced commercially for gas well use in virtually all sizes for the artillery up to 10 inches in diameter. Experiments were started voluntarily to test the scheme. While the War department is not in a position to make any definite announcement, it looks as though a long stride in national preparedness had been made.

"They just cut 'em off like sausages," is the way one officer described the new process.

New Angle Developed.

Even the necessity of boring out the squared and pointed ends after the spinning in order to make a place for the explosive charge and fuse has developed a new angle of its own. It appears in practice that impurities in the metal are forced toward the center by the spinning process and when this is cut out by boring the impurities are removed automatically.

The ten-year ammunition reserve project of the War department is based on storing $300,000,000 worth of small arms and artillery ammunition, the oldest projectiles and cartridges to be fired away each year and replaced with new stock.

If the spun shell case plan works out and a system for fast loading, fuse making, banding, etc., is developed to supplement it, presumably a material reduction could be made in the stored reserves, as the twelve-month delay in procuring projectiles in sufficient numbers after war is declared now controlling the department's plans would have been scaled down.

KEEPING WELLPREVENTING FIRE LOSSES

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

LAST year fire killed 14,542 persons, injured 15,110 more and destroyed over $500,000,000 worth of property. Ninety per cent of this loss was due to carelessness and 100 per cent was preventable.

Sixty-five per cent of all fires are in the home. Over 800 homes burn up each day of the year or near 300,000 a year.

While the number of fires is greater in the cities than in the country, the relative loss is greater in the country. This would naturally be the case, as smaller towns do not have as complete fire-fighting equipment as do the larger cities, and fires once started are apt to cause greater destruction.

How can fires be prevented? By using, as far as possible, fireproof materials in building. The development of concrete and cement as building materials will probably in time reduce the number of fires.

But how about existing houses? A few rules drawn from statistics as to the causes of fires might be adopted in every household.

Keep matches only in safe containers out of the reach of children and mice. Don't leave matches lying around loose, especially don't let them get scattered around on the floor.

Be sure a match has gone out before you throw it away.

Don't allow gas light near wood-work, curtains or other inflammable material. Don't have curtains hanging near enough to open fireplaces or gas stoves, so that the curtain can blow into the flames.

Have your furnace, grate or stove chimneys or flues cleaned and repaired every spring and inspected in the fall before starting fires.

If you use electricity, disconnect irons, toasters and other electrical fixtures when not in use. Be sure the insulation is perfect in all points needing it.

Don't allow rubbish to collect in cellars, basements, woodsheds, under stairs, in closets or garrets.

Put hot ashes in metal cans. Don't start fires with kerosene or gasoline. Don't use benzene or gasoline for cleaning. There are a number of non-inflammable substitutes made that are perfectly safe.

Keep your eyes open for possible fire risks and teach your household habits of fire prevention.

Tattooed Chinks in Dread

Consternation reigns in the native city of Shanghai, China, because of an order issued by Col. Yen Tsung-yang, acting commander of martial law, that all men bearing certain tattoo marks are to be arrested. Just what the marks are no Chinese seems to know. Hence the alarm. But the order has brought a repetition of conditions that existed a year ago when tattoos indicating membership in some secret society were banned. Now hundreds of innocent Chinese are inflicting great pain upon themselves by trying to remove tattoos with acids and by scraping their flesh with knives.

Unveiling San Martin Monument

The friendly relations existing between the United States and Argentina were more firmly cemented with the unveiling of a monument to Gen. Jose de San Martin in Judiciary square, Washington. The statue is a replica of the one standing in a public square in Buenos Aires. In the photograph can be seen the ambassador from Argentina, Honorable Pueyredon (left), and Dr. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American union, standing at attention while the band plays the Argentine national anthem.

HOW THE OATS MARKET ACTED IN 1925

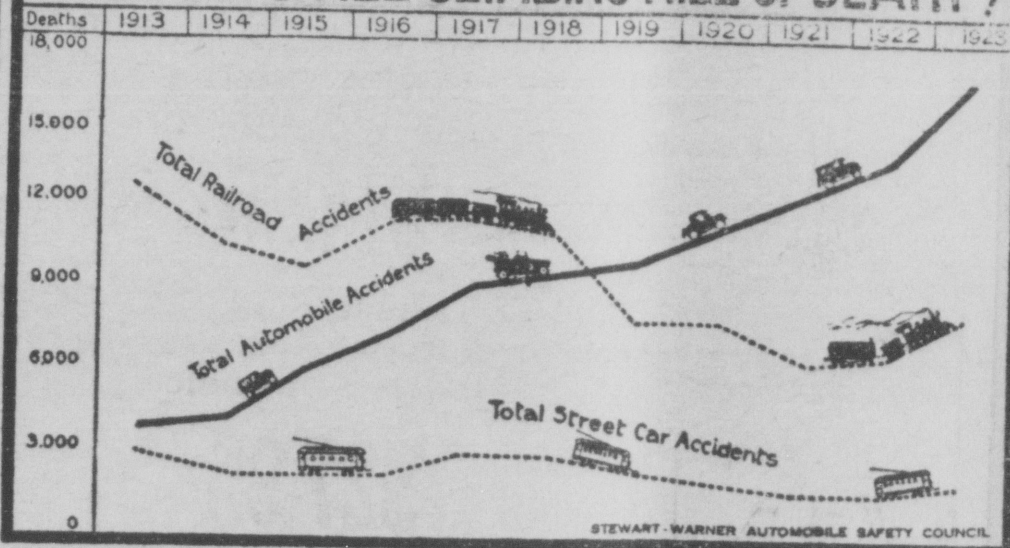

EARLY in 1925, oat prices were so high, reports the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, that consumption was actually checked. Then the market began to decline and with large stocks coming on through commercial channels, reached a low level in April, went up again in June, fell to less than 40 cents in August and stayed at that low level. The 1925 crop was 1,501,909,000 bushels and the carry-over from 1924 was larger than usual. Total supplies of oats in all sections were only 20,000,000 bushels less than in 1924 when the crop of 1,522,665,000 bushels was harvested.

Prices started to go down in February and March, went up somewhat during June but came down again in August and have maintained a general low level. Oat prices are likely to advance toward spring as commercial stocks are reduced and the consuming sections of the country draw more extensively on the terminal markets.

Auto Tragedies Increase as Other Travel Is Made Safer

AUTOS STILL CLIMBING HILL OF DEATH

WHILE railroad tragedies and street car accidents in the United States have gradually been diminishing in the last ten years, the annual toll exacted by automobile casualties is steadily mounting, says the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents. Railroad accidents have been cut more than one-third, or from 12,520 in 1913 to 8,078 in 1923, the latest government figures available. Street car fatalities also have been cut down one-third or from 3,080 in 1913 to 2,006 ten years later. Automobile deaths, on the other hand, have increased over five-fold. Against the 3,822 deaths in 1913 we have 16,452 in 1923, and the score is growing each year.

Care, more care and still more care, is the solution of this national problem. The pedestrian must be always on the alert and as spry as a kangaroo, if he is to keep out of harm's way, and the driver for his part must never relax his vigilance for a moment when human lives are at his mercy.

Ice Cream Anniversary

The year 1926 marks the seventy-fifth anniversary of the manufacture of ice cream as a commercial industry. It was in 1851 that ice cream was first manufactured and sold in Baltimore by Jacob Fussell, who is known as the father of the ice cream industry.

Friday, January 15th, we arrived in Grand Rapids, the Furniture Capital of America, with the thought of learning all we could relative to the newest patterns of furniture for this year. We also decided that we would learn all we could about the proper manner of construction of good furniture.

WE SAW MILES AND MILES

of beautiful furniture. And, folks, how we would have enjoyed taking you along with us. But, as that was impossible, we decided to do the next best thing, and so we ordered part of it shipped down here for the use of the folks about Circleville.

AN INTENSIVE COURSE IN FURNITURE MERCHANDISING

was given to those attending the market, and we took advantage of it. For five days, we attended this "school." And now, after our visit to the market, and after taking this training, we do feel that we are better fitted to render you more efficient service in your furniture buying. Bring your problems to us and we will try to solve them for you. At least, drop in and let us tell you more of what we saw and heard while

CROCKEYJOY ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

A Crockeyjoy Wedding

RUTH did as the kindly old Crockeyjoy had told her to do when she wanted to enter Crockey Town. First she brought Purz, her little silver cat with the emerald eyes, over to the side of the big red-velvet picture album. Next she opened the album to the picture of grim, old Crockey Castle.

And as soon as ever he saw the Castle, Purz came to life. He licked his whiskers just as a real cat would. Then he arched his back, and purred out his tail, and with that he stood up on his hind legs, and said he to Ruth, in his comical way, "Well, come, let's be on our journey, for I crave adventure like a tabby cat craves a mouse."

During all this while, Ruth had been shrinking in size almost as fast as a toy balloon when a pin is jabbed into it. In a moment more she was just Crockey-size. So she and Purz hastened down the great stone road which led to Crockey Castle. When they came to the drawbridge, it opened on a signal from Purz, and there they were, right in the busiest part of Crockey Town.

One of the first things Ruth noticed was that the gateway was strewn with rice grains. A long, white trail of them ran down the main street as far as she could see.

"Let's follow the rice trail," said Ruth to Purz. And follow they did. And where do you suppose it led them? Well, it ran up a street, and down a street, and through a long bazaar; then down a shaded courtyard, and with one quick pounce Purz grabbed a little figure which stood hiding in the shadows. There was a startled cry of fright. A sound of many rice grains splashing to the pavement at once. And who do you think it was that Purz had caught?

It was the Crockeyjoy's nephew. After he had got back his senses, which had been half scared out of him when he felt Purz' paws on his neck, he related to them the story of why he was there, and of what he intended doing. From the facts he told them they gathered that there was to be a wedding between a beautiful Fairy Queen and a ruling Prince of the land of Crockey. The nuptials were to be celebrated over all the kingdom.

Now, there is a saying in Crockey Land that good luck dwells for the space of "six-times-seven-moons," on the ones who succeed in hitting the royal bride and groom with so much as a single grain of rice. Purz knew of this saying, as did the Crockeyjoy's nephew, and they told Ruth of it. Then she understood why the boy had brought the rice, which had leaked from the bag, and had left the trail they had followed.

After talking it over, the three of them decided to wait together in the archway for the nuptial procession to pass them.

As they waited, a crowd began to gather about them. All sorts and classes of folks were in it. Among the last to come was a great, fat matron, who proclaimed herself to be the wife of the "biggest butcher in Crockey Town." She talked about her new silk gown, and of her diamond earrings, and of how her feet ached, until everyone about her was annoyed. Finally she seated her plump self right down on the edge of the curbstone in front of the boy. The crowd pushed him against her. This angered her, and she whacked him across the shins with the handle of her umbrella. "Ouch!" he cried. "Don't hit me. I couldn't help it."

Just at that moment there was a shout from the crowd. The procession was winding up the narrow street toward them. "Hurrah! Here they come. Watch out! Now! Now! Now!" And every one threw rice until the air was so full of it that it looked like a mimic snow storm.

They all forgot about the cross, old, butcher's wife. She wheezed and struggled and wheezed some more. Yet the crowd was jammed so tight, she couldn't get to her feet. Then her face grew red, and she clenched her teeth, and she struck out again with her umbrella. This time when she hit the Crockey boy he let out a yell of pain and he let the big bag of rice fall from his hands. It landed fair and square on top of her head. The rice ran over her hair, and down her back, and into her big wooden shoes, and even poured into her mouth.

After that the crowd broke up, for it was way past supper time in Crockey Town. Ruth and Purz said good-by to the boy, then they all three started home.

BLISS GIRLS DEFEATED BY CIRCLEVILLE

Victory Was Hard to Win as Game Was Real Contest From Start to Finish.

Circleville high girls scored a hard won victory over Bliss college girls Saturday, January 30, at the Columbus Y. M. C. A. gym. The game was a fast one from the moment when Frances Jones, Circleville, forward, scored almost immediately after the team appeared on the floor until the final whistle blew. Bliss girls, who had not lost a game during the season presented a real fighting spirit, along with a spirit of true sportsmanship.

Fay Puckett starred for Circleville by making the highest number of baskets, altho Jones played exceptionally good game.

At the end of the first half the score was 14 to 10 in Circleville's favor which steadily increased to 18 to 21 at the end of the game.
